IRVING FROST
50th Masonic Anniversary

About 60 members of the Oxford lodge No. 18, F. and A. M., went Thursday, Aug. 20, by automobile to Irving Frost's old home on the top of Frost Hill to celebrate his being raised to the degree of Master Mason 50 years ago, Aug. 19. The company spent the time enjoying the wonderful view from the top of the hill until it began to rain. Then the time was passed in the house and barn. Some of the younger brothers amused themselves pitching horseshoes.

At 5.30 o'clock a supper of beans baked in the ground was served in the barn. This in itself is a feat as it was necessary to go ¼ of a mile down the hill to find soil enough for a bean hole.

After the supper speeches were made by Past Master Dr. Albert Thompson, Past Grand Master A. S. Kimball. Past Master H. D. Smith, who acted as toast master presented Brother Frost, on behalf of the brethren, with a beautiful lamb-skin apron in memory of his long years of service in Masonry. Brother Frost responded and thanked the members in an earnest manner.

Immediately after the supper the party broke up and returned to their homes.

Irving Frost was born in Norway on Frost Hill, May 23, 1843. By trade he is a stone mason. He served as Master of Oxford Lodge from Sept. 9, 1889, to Sept. 22, 1890, and has also been High Priest of Oxford Chapter. At present Brother Frost is living in Auburn. He has recently been in poor health for some time but is now steadily improving and hopes to be able to work before long.

Party to Old Orchard.

The Veranda Club went in a party on Sunday, August 23rd to Old Orchard that one could wish for. The day was all that one could wish for. Just a perfect one at the seashore.

An outing each year is to be the special enjoyment of the club, and be looked forward to by the members. A little pleasure for a working club is a grand idea, just a change in the program.

The trip from Portland to Old Orchard and return was enjoyed by a fine trolley ride. The time at the beach was spent in sight-seeing, entering into the various sports which presented themselves. A social picnic dinner was enjoyed with friends who went with the club by invitation.

This trip was equally as pleasant as the excursion made to Togus and Augusta a few years ago, and will be ever remembered as one of the pleasant days spent by this social club.

Beginners for the New School Year.

Parents having children who are to be five years old between Sept. 1st and Jan. 1st and desiring them to attend school before another school year begins, should send them at the beginning of the fall term of school which begins Sept. 21st.

Many parents prefer not to send their children to school until more mature at six or seven years of age. Wherever the classes are large, it will be necessary this year after mid-term of fall not to admit children to the beginners class who have not previously attended school. This is done so as not to deprive those attending school regularly of the time and drill necessary for their work.

The eleventh annual Norway Lake School Reunion was very well attended. About 200 were present at the exercises in the afternoon and about 150 sat down to the bountiful New England baked bean dinner served by the ladies of Norway Lake in the beautiful pine and birch grove on the shore of Lake Pennesseewassee. The weather was ideal. The pleasant woods, cool air and sparkling waters of the lake combined to make the setting for the reunion perfect.

An informal reception was given by the arrangement committe, consisting of Mrs. W. S. Partridge, Mrs. Lottie Crane, Ralph Flood, Franklin Howe and Asa Frost, in the morning.

Following the dinner about three in the afternoon an enjoyable program was given on the platform which was decorated with a large American flag Fred Perry acted as chairman.

He spoke of Horace Perry as the Poet Laureate of the school, and of Fred Bolster as the champion declamer. Mr. Rowe paid special tribute to the Partridge family for their work to the community in promoting the reunion and sympathized with them for their sad losses of relatives.

Norway Lake Reunion, 1914.

BY FANNIE ETTA HARRIMAN
(Tune, America.)

Oh, childhood's school so dear
Kind thoughts have brought us here
For one sweet day.
School with sweet mem'ries fraught
Where faithful teachers taught
And for our future wrought
To guide our way—

We're glad to meet all here;
If spared another year
We'll see you then.
The schoolhouse by the Lake,
The grove where we partake
Of feasts our friends do make,
Say, "Come again."

By the reunions blest
We think of joy and rest;
But best we call
Thoughts, when life's school is o'er
We'll met on that glad shore
And part again no more
From loved ones all.

It was then moved that the meeting adjourn till Aug. 26, 1915.

At Home While Abroad.

Dr. C. C. Godfrey and wife and Dr. E. H. Eames and wife, with Alfred Thorne as chauffeur, of Bridgeport, Conn., are enjoying a unique summer outing.

They travel in two autos, one to carry the outfit or a trailer and the other for the party. They have spent several days just above Gibson's Grove on Lake Pennesseewassee, and they wish your reporter to say that this is one of most beautiful and desirable places they have found during their trip through New England. Unusally they stop only a night in a place but they came here last week and the end is not yet.

They take with them a collapsable waterproof tent, or rather three tents in one—two sleeping apartments at either end and a kitchen between. Their furniture is all of the collapsable kind; chairs, tables, beds and utensils, a most complete outfit. The food they take with them to use when they cannot buy fresh is in the most compact form, like powder for milk and eggs. Thus they enjoy homelike comforts when they pitch their tent.

They have been very successful in catching fish at the lake and their table has been beautifully supplied.

There is a reason why they came here. A few summers back they spent sometime at the Lakeside Inn, and they fully decided in their minds that if opportunity offered they would return to our "Gem of a Lake."

Statements That May Be Investigated. Testimony of Norway Citizens.

When a Norway citizen comes to the front, telling his friends and neighbors of his experience, you can rely on his sincerity. The statements of people residing in far away places do not command your confidence. Home endorsement is the kind that backs Doan's Kidney Pills. Such testimony is convincing. Investigation proves it true. Below is a statement of a Norway resident. No stronger proof of merit can be had.

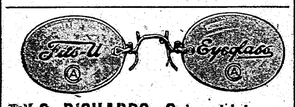

"The public statement I gave praising Doan's Kidney Pills several years ago, was right in every particular," says S. C. Foster, barber, of Main St., Norway. "I used this remedy, getting it from Stone's Drug Store and I am glad to say that it is the best one on the market. Sometimes when I catch cold, it settles on my kidneys, but a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills give me relief."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Foster had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. 34-35

What Is the Life Beyond?

Who can tell us of the future
Of the soul's abide?
Who can tell us of the homestead
Just beyond the tide?

Who can tell when in death slumbers.
That we live beyond the grave?
Out of all the great, great numbers
Who can say that one is saved?

We are referred to book of ages,
To find the proof that we live again,
That was written at different stages,
When and where we search in vain.

Of the many books that first was written,
If they were God's words where are the rest?
All this one book that tells of Heaven,
In this alone we are taught to rest.

We go to teachers, great and small,
For to explain this book;
A, says there is a hell beyond
And tells us where to look.

B, says there is no hell beyond,
He can prove it by this book,
With arguments good and strong,
And refers us where to look.

Now let us study the life beyond,
And show as much concern
As we do of the little things of life,
Then we will begin to learn.

* * * * *

Then to God, yourself and fellows be just,
Toss to the wind your creed and your sect,
And leave this world with a confident trust
To the chances that follow the next.

Prize Numerical Enigma.

The answer contains 43 letters and is a quotation from Longfellow:

1, 42, 35, 19, 25, is to unfasten.
2, 26, 41, 18, 11, is to faint.
15, 33, 4, 12, 37, is a weight.
21, 31, 6, 13, 32, is a place of safety.
23, 29, 22, 7, 17, is sober or grave.
28, 9, 34, 14, 10, is single.
36, 3, 33, 30, 27, is a seat.
39, 8, 24, 13, 17, is celebrated.
40, 16, 5, 20, 43, is an idler.

Send the answer before Sept. 21st to "Ruthven," West Bethel, Maine, and to the first correct solver five post cards will be given as a prize.

The answer to the May enigma is:—"A kiss without beard is like an egg without salt."

Only four sent the answer, when it was hoped the number would not be less than forty, and this is the order in which the letters came:

1. Effie F. Peverly, Bryant Pond.
2. E. W. Edwards, Oxford.
3. Mrs. S. W. Bradley, Nashua, N. H.
4. Mrs. Guy A. Buck, Norway.

So few manifested an interest in the May puzzle I had about decided it would be my last for the Advertiser, but so many are calling by letters for me to continue writing them enigmas to solve I am giving them another this week, and more will probably follow.

Road commissioner Dudley has completed the section of permanent road for which the town made the appropriation of $500 in June. This section extends from the foot of the hill near John Howe's to the guide post near J. E. Hathaway's, and was undoubtedly one of the worst pieces of highway in Woodstock before improvement. The road has been widened to about 21 feet between ditches, new culverts and underdrains put in and some of worst sections gravelled over, so that the stranger would hardly know it was the same road.

NORWAY, MAINE.

Norway in Scientific Literature.

Abstract of a paper read August 15th before the Maine Academy of Science, with some additions.

By Professor A. E. Verrill.

Perhaps very few people of Norway know that a considerable number of scientific papers, relating wholly or in part to the Natural History of Norway, have been published in former years.

In this article the writer does not pretend to give a complete list of such papers, but merely those that he can easily recall published since 1861, before which none are known. As this has been written without access to any library, of plants, birds, insects, etc. at Norway,

When I first began to make collections of plants, birds, insects, etc. at Norway, there was no one else in this or the neighboring towns in the least interested in these subjects. In fact I know of no one, nearer than Portland, who took much interest in any branch of Natural History except a Mr. Shaw, of Waterford, who had a small collection of minerals, and Samuel Carter and Mr. Hamlin of Paris Hill, who were interested mostly in the Mt. Mica minerals. I began first to collect minerals in Greenwood, when about 12 years old. We moved to Norway in the spring of 1853, and then I began to collect the minerals and plants in Norway, at the age of 14. About 1855, I began to collect the birds, mountaing them myself, after many failures, for no instruction was then available, and there were no Zoological manuals worthy of the name, at that time, while now there are scores of them.

Probably the first Zoological paper ever printed relative to Norway was published by me in 1862, this was the "Catalogue of the Birds of Norway, Maine" in the Proceedings of the Essex Institute, Salem, Mass. It included notes on their habits, etc. Such faunal lists were rare at that time. The printers neglected to send me any proof-sheets, which resulted in several regretted typographical errors. This paper included many species not previously recorded from Maine. Some later records of Norway birds are to be found in O. W. Knight's Birds of Maine, 1908.

It was in "Witt's Swamp" that I discovered a beautiful nest of the Water-Thrush, said to have been the first one ever found in the United States. It was built in the moss on the side of an old log and thoroughly concealed. The four eggs were beautiful. This nest and eggs were described by Dr. T. M. Brewer, of Boston, in his large work on Oology of North American Birds, published by the Smithsonian Institution. He also described some other Norway birds eggs, from my collection, in the same work.

In 1863, I published a Catalogue of the Reptiles and Amphibians of Norway, in the Proceedings of the Boston Society of Natural History. In the same work I described a rare Water-shrew (Neosorex palustris) and some other rare Shrews from Norway.

This Water-Shrew had never been taken but once before in the United States. It is still very rare. It has webbed feet and a long tail and is about the sizes of the house mouse, which it resembles in form, though related to the moles. It is an expert swimmer. One of the other rare Shrews recorded then, was Thomson's Shrew, one of the smallest mamals known in Maine, and none were previously known from this state.

The eggs and breeding habits of some Norway Salamanders were described by me in the same work, and some by S. I. Smith. My list of the Reptiles and Amphibians of Norway is also included in the Report of the Board of Agriculture of Maine, for 1862, page 141.

The early occurrences and breeding habits of the Eaves Swallows, in this region, were elucidated by me in the Proceedings of the Boston, N. H., Society and American Journal of Science, in 1865, to prove that they were not recent arrivals from the west, as had been previously believed by all ornithologists.

My collection of mounted birds, about 200, made between 1855 and 1859, was mostly sold to the Museum of Comparative Zoology, in 1860 or 1861, and many of the specimens have been studied and described by later writers on birds. Others were added later to my collection, some were also sent by B. D. Verrill; Irving Frost and others.

In 1860 to 1863, I obtained a large collection of mammals of Maine, for the Cambridge Museum of Comparative Zoology, at the request of Professor Louis Agassiz. I was then studying with him.

Many of these were sent alive, or frozen if in the winter.. It included a very large gray-wolf from the Umbagog region; and a full grown black bear. These were frozen when received; and they were preserved in alcohol by me, as Agassiz requested. There were several Caribou, from the lake section, many Sables, Minks, Hedgehogs, etc. Many of these were obtained in Norway, through the aid of my brother, B. D. Verrill.

Those from the Umbagog Lake region came from J. G. Rich a well known hunter and guide.

Deer were unknown in Maine at that time and wolves were very rare. I also obtained later a good collection of the skulls of Maine Mammals. These collections as well as those of Insects and Shells, mentioned before, nearly all went to the Museum of Comparative Zoology and have been studied there by several writers, and were described in their various works.

Lists of all these Norway collections are to be found in the corresponding Annual Reports of the Museum of Comparative Zoology and in those of the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University. These reports should be consulted for additional details of dates, etc.

Very little has been written of the Norway fishes. Perhaps there are few that are unusual.

The very small Smelt, that used to be found in vast numbers, in spring, running up to spawn in the small streams flowing into the lake, was described as a new species by Professor E. D. Cope. It was formerly destroyed by the natives here in untold numbers, until it became nearly extinct. No doubt it was a very important food of the game fishes of the lake. It also occurs in Songo Pond, Albany; and Bryants Pond I am told.

Perhaps the most valuable study of Norway Natural History was made by the late Alpheus Hayatt, my classmate, afterwards Professor in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Secretary of the Boston Society of Natural History, and assistant in the Museum of Comparative Zoology of Harvard. He came here in 1864, by my request, to study the Bryozoa, that I had found in unusual abundance in Pennesseewassee Lake. He remained here some time and made excellent microscopic drawings of the living animals, many of which had never before been figured nor described. They are very elegant creatures when seen living, under the microscope.

All are translucent animals growing in large colonies, like coral animals, but much more highly organized. The compound colony of one remarkable species found here (Cristatella) creeps about as if it were a single animal. Another (Alcyonella) forms large gelatinous masses on submerged stumps and logs. Its colinies often become more than a foot across and two inches or more thick, and far larger than it has been found elsewhere. Prof Hyatt published the results of his reserches on these "Freshwater Polyzoa" as a handsomely illustrated memoir, in the Proceedings of the Essex Institute, Salem, Mass., about 1866.

Large numbers of the Insects of Norway were collected by me before 1859. Afterwards from 1860 to 1865, Professor S. I. Smith continued to collect the Insects. Most of his Insects, many hundreds in all, were sent to the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard, while I was an assistant there, but his later ones, 1864 and 1865, were sent to Yale. Many Norway Insects from these collections have been described or named in the scientific works of S. H. Scudder, A. S. Packard, and several other writers.

The most remarkable Insect discovered here by Professor Smith, was an entirely new or undescribed species of the large butterfly-like Bombycid Moths. It is about five to seven inches across the expanded wings and has very handsome colors.

He named and described it as a new species, calling it Samia Columbia. He found its large silken cocoons attached to heath-like plants on the bog back of the Academy grounds, and raised the mature winged Insects from the cocoons. The larva has since been found feeding on the larch. His description was published in the Proceedings of the Boston Society of Natural History, Vol. IX, page 343, in 1865. It has since been described, by C. H. Fernald, in the Canadian Entomologist, Vol. X, page 44 and by several other writers, for it is a very notable species. Its hymenopterous parasites, raised by Smith, were described in the same work, 1865, by Prof. A. S. Packard. Professor Smith also published a later Report on the Orthoptera of Maine, in which he described many species from Norway and vicinity.

Dr. Scudder, subsequently described in his work on Orthoptera, some of the same specimens and others from this vicinity. He also used Norway specimens in writing his great beautifully illustrated work on the Butterflies of New England.

The land and fresh-water Shells were collected pretty thoroughly, both by me before 1859, and later by S. I. Smith, but no special list was printed. These collections were later studied and referred to by W. G. Binney and other writers.

From 1855 to 1859, the plants found in the vicinity of Norway were collected and preserved in my herbarium, with records of their earliest flowering. From 1858 to 1865, Sidney I. Smith, afterwards Professor in Yale University, continued the collection of the plants. Some specimens of these collections were studied and mentioned by Professor Asa Gray, the eminent botanist of Harvard.

Professor Smith, in 1863 to 1865, also sent to Professor Gray, at his request, living plants of some of the rarer Orchids of Norway, for his studies of the fertilization of plants by Insects, which were published in the American Journal of Science soon afterwards. Unfortunately, no general catalogue of our large plant collection was published. It would have been of much value, for the botany of this district has changed considerably since that time, and the large numbers of records of the times of flowering would have been very useful, as indicating the variations in the seasons, as to temperature, and amount or rain, in different years.

As mentioned above, I began to collect Minerals in Norway in the spring of 1853. That same year, or the next Mr. A. J. Burbank, principal of the Norway Liberal Institute, borrowed all my best mineral specimens as a nucleus for a collection of Minerals to be placed in the Academy, as he said. When he went away, a few months later, he took them with him. I never saw them or him afterwards. Of some of them I never found additional specimens.

I particularly regretted the loss, in this way, of a good crystal of emerald, the only one ever found in this vicinity. It was a crystal about 1 ½ inches long and over an inch in diameter, transparent and of good color for about a third of its lenght. It came from near the Greenwood line, and was mentioned in my lists.

He also carried away my only local specimen of Amazon Stone, a fine bright green crystal from Waterford; and my best Mt. Mica Tourmalines.

One of the rarest of the Norway Minerals is Chrysoberyl. Several crystals were obtained by me on Pike's Hill and in Greenwood. The largest and best one was found on Pike's Hill by Oliver Shackley. This is still in my collection. It was figured and described by the eminent mineralogist of Yale, Professor James D. Dana, in the later editions of his Text Book of Mineralogy. No others have been found like it.

Although Norway has become a notable center for gem cutting, few have been obtained actually within the town limits.

The adjacant towns; Paris, Greenwood, Auburn, Stoneham, and Albany have furnished far more. Yet new and better localities may yet be found in Norway. Some of the famous Greenwood localities are closeby and the rocks are of the same character.

In the Geological Report of Professor C. H. Hitchcock (1863) published in the Seventh Report of the Maine Board of Agriculture, for 1862, Norway received very little attention. I personally contributed to his report a list of the less common Minerals that I found in Norway, Greenwood, Paris, etc., together with a description of Mt. Mica and its Minerals, page 406 to 412. The latter had previously appeared in the Oxford Democrat, published in Paris, and was then the only general description printed of that locality.

In 1862, I had already published a list of the rare Minerals first found by me in Norway, Greenwood, Paris, etc., in the Proceedings of the Boston Society of Natural History. These were also published later in Professor J. D. Dana's large Text Book of Mineralogy.

WHEN YOU ARE NERVOUS

you have the first symptom of a run-down system, and nervous people too often conceal their aches and pains and suffer in silence, while, if neglected, this condition often foreruns more serious trouble.

If those so afflicted would stop taking medicine containing alcohol or drugs which menace the foundations of health, and just take the pure, strengthening nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, it would create new blood to pulsate through the organs, refresh their bodies and build up the whole nervous system. It is rich, sustaining nourishment, free from wines, alcohols or drugs. Shun substitutes.

COLDS, HEADACHES, BILIOUSNESS,

should be remedied at once. They debilitate the system—pave the way for dangerous ills.

For 60 years, "L. F." Atwood's Medicine has effectively arrested these ailments. It never fails to afford complete relief, as Miss Knowles here testifies:

"Have used the "L. F." Atwood's Medicine for many years, I can say we have never known them to fail of producing satisfactory results in colds, headaches, biliousness, etc., when used according to directions."

The entire lower part of the camp was decorated with garlands of evergreen and festoons of wild flowers which the guests had gathered from the hotel grounds during the day.

The invited guests motored down and many also arrived by water in a varied class of power boats, and the entire flotilla was moored to the long pier which was illuminated by Japanese lanterns, which were also used throughout the camp and grove.

Music was furnished by local talent, and all of the newest dances were exemplified, with many individual exhibitions of fancy dancing.

The popularity of "Farrington's" as the mecca for young people, is evidenced by the increasing attendance at these dances, and it is intended to inaugurate them as a regular feature from year to year.

Hiram Centennial.

August 12th was a historic day for Hiram, such as the oldest inhabitants had never seen.

At early hour the crowds began to come in from near and distant towns and later the trains brought a vast throng. The attendance during the day was generally estimated at 5000. Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New York, Colorado and California were represented.

It stands to the credit of the grand old town that from dawn till midnight not a case of discord or disorder was noted.

During the past week Elmer Brown of Portland had been busy decorating with fine effect the places of business, public buildings and nearly all the residences in the village. At morning, noon and night three guns were fired.

The parade was a complete success, creditable to the firms and socities represented.

Among the notable floats and carriages, was one containing nineteen veterans of the Civil war. Among them Chadbourn Rand of Denmark, aged 92, a native of Hiram, also James Evans, Esq., and Ephraim E. Hanson, both of whom played in the band in the funeral procession that escorted the remains of President Lincoln through the streets of Philadelphia to rest in Independence hall.

A boat representing the Methodist church, date 1810, the float of the Congregational church, date 1826, the Y. P. U. and C. E. Knights of Phythias had a fine float with their degree team of knights in their uniforms. The Saco Valley Temple of Phythian sisters, a very large American flag born supported at the corners and sides by ten boy scouts, and the M. C. 2 X Ladies' Reading club had fine floats.

The float of Mt. Cutler grange No. 152 was an emblematic and unique affair drawn by 18 oxen, headed by Calvin F. Clemons, mammoth 8 feet oxen weighing 5000 pounds. These were awarded a prize.

The pupils of the schools made a fine appearance. A carriage contained Chas. J. Small, Edward L. Allen, Frank R. Merrifield, selectmen Everett W. Stuart, Gardner H. Rankin, Esq., Charles R. Bean, centennial committee. John Cram's cariage carried aged citizens. His horses were awarded a prize.

Seth C. Clemons and Messrs. Twitchell, Champlain & Co., had floats representing their business.

The Grange float received the first prize, the Methodist church, 2nd and the Ladies' Reading Club, third.

After this came a parade of automobiles, many of them elaborately decorated passing through the streets of both villages. The prizes given for the best decorations were given to James Williams, Grace Dyke and C. E. Hunt, all of Sebago.

The speaker's stand was on the R. G. Green lot near K. of P. hall. Floyd W. Burnell presided with his usual ready ease and tact. Rev. Esra B. Pike of Exeter, N. H., a native of Hiram offered a very appropriate prayer. Rev. Hervey H. Hoyt, pastor of the Hiram Universalist church, gave a cordial welcome to the assembly in a most eloquent speech.

The chairman then presented in a few, neat, felicitous words Ex-Congressman Samuel W. Gould of Skowhegan who needed no introduction, having ben reared in Hiram.

Mr. Gould delivered an oration, tracing the progress and changes in the century and holding the large assembly with his forceful eloquent periods. His pathetic and touching tribute to mother's love and influence was doubtedly inspired by the presence on the platform of his venerable mother, Mrs. Ruth Gould, aged 90 years.

Mr. Gould illustrated the love of home by reading a poem entitled "Coming Home," written by Llewellyn A. Wardsworth in a distant state fifty years ago.

Governor Haines was not able to be present but was well represented by Maj. E. E. Philbrook and Maj. Charles G. Keen of his staff, also Hon. Frederic Kinsman, chairman of his council, who made a brief address.

A beautiful ode composed by Mrs. Minnie R. Hoyt, entitled "Dear Native Town," was then sung by the assembly in the tune "America." A historic address written by Llewellyn A. Wadsworth and his centennial poem "To the Returning Sons and Daughters of Hiram," were not read but printed in pamphlet with the program.

In the afternoon a base ball game resulted in a victory of Kezar Falls over Bridgton, 10 to 4. Harry Lord of Chicago, a native of Porter, a champion in base ball circles played in the Kezar Falls club in which he began his career.

A large crowd lined the river banks to witnss the water sports:

A junior ball game between Hiram and Portland was also played, which Portland won. There was also a foot race.

Clarence C. Kimball served as marshall, with S. N. Short, Clarence Ward Alton Rankin, Connick serving as aids, mounted. Helen Connick took the second prize.

By invitation of John B. Pike, Esq., many persons visited the old Wadsworth mansion built by General Pelig Wadsworth in 1800, and especially the Longfellow room which was used by the poet, H. W. Longfellow, on his visits and vacations in his grandfather's family in his youth. The quaint old furnishings, the canopy bed and the wooden ceilings of pine boards two feet wide left as when he occupied it eighty years ago, have long been objects of interest to guests and visitors.

George T. Osgood opened to the public his large collection of old-fashioned fire arms, swords, cutlasses, relics, rare minerals, etc.

The Kezar band of twenty pieces gave excellent music during the day and evening. The fire works in the evening were very fine.

The centennial committee aided by Nancy Rankin, Mrs. Celia H. Sanborn and various sub-committees and Mrs. Annette K. Richardson, corresponding secretary, have labored hard and won the commendation they receive.

Miss Ethel, he began, or Ethel, I mean—I've known you long enoug to drop the Miss, haven't I?

She fixed her lovely eyes upon him with a meaning gaze. Yes, I think you have, she said. What prefix do you wish to substitute.

There is an old saying that every man is a physician or a fool at forty, meaning that the man who has not learned to take care af himself at that age never will learn.

Rev. Jessie E. Jordan.

Rev. Mrs. Jessie E. Jordan, wife of Cyrus F. Jordan, for many years a resident of Mechanic Falls, and one of the most famous Adventist preachers in the Country, died at her home on the Lewiston road at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon after an illness of long duration.

Mrs. Jordan was 67 years old. She was born at Casco, the daughter of Rev. Nathaniel and Susan Davis Strout. Her mother was born at Limington. Mrs. Jordan had lived in Mechanic Falls for 20 years.

Besides her husband she is survived by a son who lives at Waltham, Mass., and two sisters, one at Gray and one at Bridgton.

Tobias L. Eastman of Fryeburg has been elected Secretary-Treasurer of the 12th Maine Regiment Association. Among those who attended the annual meeting at Dunstan were: Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Eastman, M. W. Stewart, Fryeburg. George A. Harmon, P. F. Mayberry, John Monro, Mechanic Falls; William W. Watson, South Waterford; Emerson Kimball, Jesse Kimball, Mrs. Hannah Small, Frank Milliken, East Hiram; O. D. Golden, Harrison; J. F. Plummer, South Paris; James Hillingworth, W. C. Bridgham, Daniel M. Crockett, Bridgton; Marion Smith, Robert Poor, Canton.

Quite a large number of folks of Maine are devoting considerable time to the examination of the dimes which comes into their possession hoping to collect four dimes, bearing the mint marks F, O, R and D upon them. A ficticious report has spread the country like wildfire to the effect that four dimes bearing the above initials, returned to the Ford Motor company would entitle the lucky person to a Ford machine. The yarn was of course started for a joke as there are no dimes bearing the mint marks R or F, and folks who thus expect to obtain a Ford car for forty cents are doomed to certain disappointment.

A Habit With Him.

Brought up before the municipal court, the old offender had his witnesses with him, a fine array of them, to prove that he could not posibly have committed the misdemeanor of which he was accused.

"What is your excuse going to be this time?" inquired the judge.

"I can prove an alibi, your honor."

"An alibi? What, again? Why, to my personal recollection you've been up before me five times, and you've always had an alibi. It may be right—I don't say it isn't—but I'm curious to know whether you were ever once, in your whole life, where you were supposed to be!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Green Sunsets.

Green sunsets seen by the Russian explorers in the polar regions have been matched in England. Throughout November and December of 1883 the sunsets and afterglows were of wonderful intensity and varied colors. At Chelsea especially the sun went down over the Thames amid a blaze of unearthly beauty ranging from deepest red to green, as may be seen in a series of water color sketches made at the time and now preserved in the Chelsea free library. Sir Norman Lockyer and other astronomers attributed these winter sunsets to the volcanic dust projected by the great eruption of Krakatoa, in Java, in the previous August.

How to Remodel Last Year's Suit.

There are a good many modernizing touches which any home seamstress could give to last year's linen suit, and if you want to go to the expense of having a tailor remodel it he can do so in a way that will make it look like new.

This year, like every year, shows plenty of straight tailored coats, slightly double breasted, with regulation coat sleeves and notched collars. They are little different from the plain tailored coat of last year, excepting they bulge a little more perhaps about the waist. But the more elaborate coats are, most of them, single breasted, and any tailor could make a single breasted coat of a double breasted one by cutting away the old coat and inserting a figured silk, crepon or cretonne waistcoat or one of contrasting material in plain color.

These little waistcoats, reaching a little below the waist and ending in points or belted into a belt of the same material, which hooks or buttons loosely, are seen in many of the new coats. They are stitched at the edges to make them flat and to help them keep their shape, and they are generously decorated with tiny pearl buttons or with soutaching in silk braid.

Another modernizing touch is the binding of silk braid. Many an old coat really looks well excepting that it has sagged a little about the bottom, and the edges look worn or shiny from laundering. Many of the new coats are bound about the edge with braid, which also binds the collars and cuffs and which is stitched down one or two seams of the skirts. The old coat could be trimmed where it has sagged so that it is even again and then bound with braid, either black or of a darker shade of the color of the suit.

The braid binding, of course, makes washing of the linen suit difficult. Dry cleaning can be as easily applied to the braid as to the linen. A black satin collar, another popular feature of many of the season's suits, with cuffs to match, helps to make it unnecessary to wash it, and, for that matter, so does the braid binding, for it is always the collars and cuffs and the edges of the coat which first show soil.

HOW TO ARRANGE A BUTTERFLY PARTY.

At this season of the year, when country places are looking their prettiest, why not have the children's party out of doors? Instead of boisterous games a butterfly hunt would be a pleasant form of entertainment.

Butterflies of all colors may be made of paper and hidden in the shrubbery, among the flowers and in other places that will suggest themselves. Have one golden butterfly concealed in an especially good place.

Give each child a bag made of tulle or muslin and tell her to hunt for the butterflies. Have a prize for the one finding the greatest number and one particular prize for the child discovering the golden butterfly.

Refreshments served on the porch will please the little folks and may be made appropriate for the occasion.

How to Clean a Carafe.

Every housekeeper who owns a cut glass carafe has been up against the proposition of cleaning out the deposit on the inside. Hot water, besides being extremely bad for the glass, is of little avail, even if it be very soapy. Here is a process which takes but a few moments and is very satisfactory: Place in the bottle a teaspoonful of hydrochloric acid or spirits of salts; manipulate the bottle so that every portion of it shall be thoroughly rinsed. The deposit, no matter how hardened, will be removed immediately. When the carafe has been thoroughly cleaned rinse well in clear water.

How to Make Raspberry Sauce.

For this use one pint of raspberry juice, two teaspoonfuls of flour or one of cornstarch, one-half cupful of sugar and four eggs. Beat the eggs well and mix the flour with a little water till smooth, then put all into a saucepan with the sugar and the juice. Set in another pan of boiling water and stir constantly till the sauce thickens. A few crushed berries may be added if desired. This is a good sauce for use with any simple pudding.

How to Clean Silver Quickly.

Put a handful of salt or soda in any aluminium vessel (pan or dish), place the silver to be cleaned in this dish, cover with water, lift out and rub dry with linen towel. The silver will be brighter than if silver paste or polish were used, and this method takes less time.

How to Embroider Buttonholes.

If the large eyelets in French embroidery are first worked in outline stitch, as one would a stem, and then cut out and embroidered they will hold their shape much better.

Many country boys are planning to attend the agricultural colleges this fall, so they won't have to work, farming.

A Clever Device

A Story Showing How a Fortune Hung In the Balance

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

"John," said Mary MacKnight to her husband when he came home from business, "what do you suppose?"

"What do I suppose? Why, I suppose I'm to have a good dinner. I'm certainly hungry."

"Aunt Cynthia is coming to live with us. You know she was at our house till father died. Then she went to live with Ellen Stone."

"What's the matter with Ellen Stone?"

"Aunt Cynthia thinks she doesn't care for her except for what she can get out of her. Miss Stone is very extravagant—runs up bills and has them sent to Aunt Cynthia. You know Aunt Cynthia is very well off."

"I didn't till you told me. How do you know which is at fault, your aunt or her niece?"

"I don't. I have never seen Ellen Stone."

"What are you going to do about taking your aunt in?"

"That depends upon you."

"No, it doesn't; decide it for yourself."

Mrs. MacKnight was one of those women with whom any one could get on. She was kind hearted and would like very much to give her aunt a home. Mrs. Cynthia Withers, a widow, would pay a good round sum for her board, and that would be a benefit to Mrs. MacKnight, who, on her husband's salary, found it difficult to make ends meet. John MacKnight would rather have had Old Nick come to reside in his house, but he knew that pecuniarily it would relieve the strain on his wife, and he consented for her sake.

Mrs. Withers came and seemed much relieved to get out of Miss Stone's clutches. The old lady was a good deal broken down, and Mary MacKnight devoted herself to building her up. In this she succeeded, so far as any one could succeed, having a soothing effect upon her and taking great pains to minister to her comfort. The aunt had been much attached to Mary while the latter was a child, and it seemed now that she could not get on with any one else.

Mrs. Withers had a son who was of a roving disposition. He was not fitted to take care of his mother nor would she have been able to live with him, owing to her nervous condition. A year after she came to the MacKnights, she received news that her son had died abroad. After his death she said to Mary:

"I'm going to make a new will. While I was living with Ellen Stone I think she must have hypnotized me, for one day when I was ill she asked me to sign a paper, and I did as she bid me. She had provided two witnesses, and this makes me think that the paper I signed was a will. If so I have no doubt that it cut off my own son, to whom I had left all my property except a legacy to you. When I got better I asked Ellen to let me see the paper I had signed, and she said that, since my recovery, it was of no consequence; fearing that I was going to die, she had simply had me sign instructions with regard to my funeral and giving her authority to draw the necessary funds. When I insisted on seeing what I had signed she said she had burned it."

The new will executed by Mrs. Withers left Mary MacKnight all her property. The aunt showed the document to her heir and told her that in case of her death she would find it in an antique writing desk in her room in which she kept all her papers.

Not long after the execution of this will Mrs. Withers was advised by her physician to go to a sanitarium, where she would escape the noises of a city and have such trained attendance as she required. She did not wish to go, nor did her niece wish her to go. Though she was a great care, Mary had become accustomed to minister to her wants, and since she was Mary's only living near blood relative Mary had grown every year more attached to her. Mary went with her to the sanitarium and regretfully left her there.

It was hoped that the invalid would after a rest be so restored as to warrant her return, but she gradually became more dependent on doctors and nurses and remained in the sanitarium as long as she lived.

One day in February John MacKnight put his wife on a steamer and sent her to the Bermuda islands. The winter had been long, and Mary had not stood up under it very well. While she was away John slept at home, taking his meals outside.

It happened that the day Mary returned, her husband was unable to meet her at the dock, being detained at his place of business by a matter of importance. Mary arrived at home about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and, having a duplicate key with her, let herself into the house. Going at once upstairs she was about to enter her room when she heard something that sounded like the rustle of skirts in another chamber formerly occupied by her aunt and which had been kept just as the old lady had left it in expectation that she would return to it.

Mary entered the room and there, endeavoring to conceal herself behind the window curtains, was a woman. Seeing that she was discovered the intruder came forth and stood the picture of misery.

"What are you doing in my house?" asked Mrs. MacKnight, with severity.

"Let me go; please let me go! I have stolen nothing!"

The woman was about thirty years old, comely and handsomely dressed.

"What are you doing here, I say?" repeated Mary. "You are not a thief; you are a lady."

There were quick flashings in the eyes of the stranger indicating that she was looking for some method of extricating herself. Finally rising from her cowering attitude she said defiantly:

"I will not attempt to deceive you. I am no thief. I did not come here to steal. I came to meet the man I love, who is mine by right, yours by law."

"My husband! You come here to—Oh, heavens!"

"I know not who you are, but I do know that I am the only woman he loves."

Striding past Mrs. MacKnight defiantly, she left the room and hurried down the staircase. Mary, on the verge of collapse, fell on the bed. She heard the front door open, then the voice of her husband.

"I beg your pardon, madam; but I should like to know what you have been doing in my house."

"Let me go," came the voice of the woman, who had just gone downstairs.

"Not until I have received a satisfactory explanation as to the cause of your presence here."

Mary sprang from the bed. The woman must be a thief after all and had made her believe that she had come to meet John in order to get away with the valuables she had taken and escape arrest. The thought was mingled by a delightful feeling of relief that her husband was innocent. Rushing to the landing, she cried:

"Don't let her go, John; she's a thief."

John closed the front door, shutting the intruder in. Mary ran down and confronted the woman with her husband. Both were too intent on the matter of preventing the thief from getting away with whatever she had stolen to think of saluting each other after their long separation.

"Turn over the plunder," said John, "You may as well give it up to me as to the police."

"I have no plunder," said the woman drawing quick breaths in her excitement.

"Very well, you have been caught in my house, and that is trespass. Mary, go to the 'phone and call for the police."

"Hold!" said the woman.

"Well?"

She darted her eyes about her. One thing alone might have saved her—a fire, but there was no fire in the house except in the furnace in the basement. In her desperation the woman took from under her outer coat a paper and tried to tear it, but it was folded, and she was not successful. John snatched it from her and, looking at an indorsement on the outside, read, "Last Will and Testament of Cynthia Withers."

"Who are you and what do you want with this?" asked John.

The woman made no reply for a few minutes; then she said:

"Since I have not succeeded there is no harm done and you can well afford to let me go away quietly. I am Ellen Stone."

"Ellen Stone!" gasped Mary.

"Go on," said John.

"Mrs. Withers died this morning in the sanitarium. If I could have got out with that paper I would have inherited all her property, for I have a will dated long before that one, drawn in my favor."

"But how did you know where this will was kept?" asked Mary.

"When Mrs. Withers lived with me she kept all her papers in her antique desk. I knew she must have made a second will, and there was a chance that it was in the desk. Learning that there was no one in the house during the day, I came here and, bringing a tool to raise a sash, got in. I found the desk and the will, as I hoped, and had you, Mrs. MacKnight, been a minute later I would have made good my escape. I made pretense of having come here to meet your husband, hoping that it would prevent your detaining me for a thief. Had you, Mr. MacKnight, been a minute later I would have succeeded in passing the second danger."

She paused a few moments, then continued:

"You have nothing to gain by prosecuting me for this attempt to get possession of Mrs. Withers' will, and I see no reason why you should not suffer me to depart."

"I can forgive you," said Mary, "for endeavoring to deprive me of a fortune even by a criminal ruse, but it is not so easy to forgive you for pretending that you had won him from me. Suppose, as you have said, he had not arrived till you had gone. You would not only have stolen the fortune my aunt intended for me, but it is quite possible that you might have made an irreparable breach between him and me. No; I cannot permit you to go free."

The woman cowered at this. She had committed an offense that if pressed would send her to prison for many years. John MacKnight interposed:

"Mary," he said, "you must remember that where one is cornered and must decide quickly the consequences of an act are not carefully considered. I recommend mercy."

The wife, who had so nearly been separated from her husband as well as losing a fortune, considered a moment, then said:

"Do as you like, John."

MacKnight opened the door and said to the woman one word—

"Go!"

"I heard him behind the door pleading for just one. They must be engaged."

"Naw, they're married. It was a dollar he was pleading for."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Swimming Best of Summer Sports

Almost every summer girl knows how to swim a little, for the days have passed when the bathing girl sat on the beach in a fascinating costume which was never intended to be wet by the rude sea waves. Nowadays the average woman who dons a bathing suit means business—that is, she intends to go into the water, and does—she takes a short or long swim and then comes out refreshed and invigorated.

While most girls swim a little, not many swim well. That is, they can do the simple breast stroke, and maybe the back stroke, but fail to attempt the overarm or side stroke, because they think these two too difficult. As a matter of fact they they are nothing of the kind. Just how the average swimmer may add these movements to her list of strokes is told by an expert woman swimmer.

"Supposing you can swim breast stroke and simple back stroke and you want to get on to something which is going to make you travel faster—a stroke which will make you cut through the water with ease and grace without disturbing the surface—then make up your mind to learn either side or overarm. One or the other is sure to suit you, and you have to learn sidestroke before you can attempt overarm," says this expert.

"From the basis of breast stroke you may begin to learn the side stroke as the first step. First you must decide on which side you ought to swim. The best way is to try both, and the side which seems most natural and easy is the one for you. We will go on the supposition that upon sampling you come to the conclusion that the right is best. The majority of people seem to find it the easier, and it is really better because the heart is then uppermost and in a free position. Anyone learning to swim on the left side will, of course, reverse the following positions and always take left.

"The first thing to learn is to do the proper kick, and it is unfortunate that this is often incorrectly taught by swimming instructors. It is best to hold on to the steps or side rail of the bath, lying on your side at right angles to the side of the bath. Press the lower or right hand against the side, or a low step, so as to keep your feet on the surface. One leg only does the work, the other simply conforms to its movements, swinging lightly to and fro with knee held stiff.

The right or lower leg must make a semicircle kick with a screw-like movement. The other leg swings slightly forward, while the other goes backwards, knee bent, in a rotary movement with the toes turned in. It must come back with a swing and with force to join the the left leg as it drops back to position. The resting position of course is with the legs and feet together in a straight line—the drive with the right leg being the propelling power. This simple movement needs no end of practice before the real screw kick can be efficiently used.

"The arm movement is comparatively easy, but should at first be practised without the legs. Lie still on your side with right cheek resting in the water and your right arm shoulder buried right in; your left leg should just show on the surface. Bring your hands together at your chest, then shoot your right hand out, fingers first and palm downward, beyond and above your head, at the same time drawing your left hand smartly down to your side, making your hand and wrist act as a paddle. Rest in this position a moment, then draw your right hand straight down till it reaches your right side and let it creep back to its first position at your chest. Your left hand meanwhile glides back along your body to rejoin the right at the original position.

"When you can do your arms and legs separately and absolutely mechanically without having to concentrate your mind on what you are doing, the time has come to combine the movements. Now there is one broad rule to remember—when your right hand is above your side, your legs must be together and in a straight line. This is the position when you must rest your stroke and let yourself glide along from the impetus attained by the movement of the last stroke. Then it follows that somewhere between this rest an the movement when you come to the same position again your arms and legs must work together in perfect timing. Now it is this same timing which is so difficult to grasp, but once it is mastered the stroke is easy. When the hands are at the chest, the feet should be apart and all four members must swing into their correct places at exactly the proper time, so as to get the full benefit of the glide forward.

Birds Destroying the Army Worm.

The army worm pest has come and gone. Fields of grass, corn and other grain have been blighted and destroyed, and human ingenuity has been tested in the effort to cope with the infliction. Doubtless the number of worms and the injury caused by them have been exaggerated, neverthless great damage has been done in some localities in spite of all that could be done to check their ravages. A great quantity of poisoned bran was scattered about promiscuously, or sown in the trenches surrounding the fields. As a result, numerous army worms, many birds and some poultry were destroyed.

It cannot be expected that our birds in their present numbers can entirely check an outbreak as that of the army worm, but if we can avoid killing them by poisons and if we can increase their numbers they may be able to prevent the first increase which finally results in the overwhelming hosts that have attacked our fields this year.

Young Fawn.

A pretty sight to a lover of wild animals is the young fawn at the Auburn Fish Hatchery and Supt. John Stanley is as careful of the little animal as Mr. and Mrs. Deer are, says the Lewiston Sun.

The little fellow is now several weeks old and unlike the older deer is rather shy. The two older ones which are two years of age have become very tame and folow Mr. Stanley about the enclosure and like to eat out of his hands.

They are very fond of new milk for a diet. As a rule deer mate in December and the young ar eborn about the first of June. More often the doe gives birth to two. The buck's horns at the hatchery are now covered with velvet which it is expected he will shed this fall as two years is the customary time for them to do so.

The Blue and the Gray at Gettysburg 1863-1913.

This little book written by Miss Elsie Dorothea Tibbetts of Bangor is the only story of the great Peace Reunion of the Blue and the Gray at Gettysburg—a story of Gettysburg in '63 when the greatest battle of the civil war surged thro the quiet Pennsylvania valleys and filledthe nation with terror and anxiety—and again after fifty years when the armies of Meade and Lee came back to the blood soaked battlefield to camp side by side in peace and unity.

All that happened when the ranks of Meade and Lee hurled death and destruction at each other from Seminary and Cemetery Ridges and the battle raged about Round Top, the Devil's Den, in the wheatfield and the peach orchard, is told, not in the words of history but in the vivid words of those who as private soldiers in the ranks of Blue and Gray, fought there those three terrible days and have lived to tell the story. All these vivid stories that only the soldiers can tell, are intermingled in the narrative of the great reunion—the story of the fifty years later when the armies of Meade and Lee marched back again to the battlefield of old to camp side by side in one great tented city.

All that happened during their week together—their stories and meetings and peace-makings, as well as the official celebration, speeches, etc. and the description of the buildings and maintaining of the camp itself—the author tells from actual observations and experience for she attended the reunion with her soldier-father and lived in the midst of the great camp.

The little volumn is bound in cloth and contains 16 illustraticns of the battlefield and camps.

It is on sale at A. J. Huston's 92 Exchange street, or may be secured from the author at 170 Court street, Bangor.

Tired of His Job.

When Tom took the position that he now holds, his employer noted with some curiosity that he had changed about a good deal from place to place.

"Young fellows are apt to do that while they're trying to find the place they're best fitted for," he said to himself. He liked the bright alert look in Tom's face, and while the latter had not had experience in the special line of work that he was taking up, his new employer felt that he had "good stuff" in him and would work out his problems all right.

"I have a lot of footing here I'd like to have you do," the bookkeeper said to Tom the other day, and brought out a formidable-looking book in which there were many page of figures to be added "I'd like to haye the figures by tomorrow evening if you can get them ready for me."

"Oh, yes, I can do that all right," Tom answered readily. He worked steadily for perhaps half an hour, then turned to his neighbor at the next desk with a long-drawn sigh. "I'm sick of my job already," he laughed. I guess I'll change off to something else for awhile." And when the bookkeeper came to his desk on an errand a little later, the big book had been laid aside, and Tom was addressing envelopes for a circular that was to be sent out to the firm's customers.

By the time Tom had addressed five hundred enveopes he was sick of that kind of work, too, and he went off to the shipping room to see if he could find something to do there that would not be so tedious.

In hiring him, Tom's employer had felt that it was more or less of an experiment to take somebody who was inexperienced in his special line of work, but had confidence that Tom would be able to master the difficulties that were sure to present themselves. He is beginning to be a little doubtful now, and to understand better why Tom has changed about so much as he has.

Tom quickly gets tired, or nervous, or "sick of his job," when he is set at anything that is hard or tedious; he wants to lay it aside and try something else. He has not the determination and persistance that will make him stick to a distasteful piece of work until he has "cleaned it up," as the office phrases go. He cannot apply himself to one kind of work, but likes to keep changing from one thing to another. And because he has not learned to concentrate all his thoughts and efforts on each kind of work as it comes to him, he is not making any progress in mastering the new work and the new ploblems that are continually fronting him. His employer is watching with a growing sense of disappointment that Tom is not going to "make good." Tom, did he but know it, is forming a habit which will surely interefere with his sucess in watever line of work he may choose.

After one has read the war news which has practically filled the sheets of the dailies these days and then sits back to reflect upon the campaign, he comes to the conclusion he knows about as much of what really takes place as he did before he looked at the paper.

Brief Sketches of Local Business Enterprises.

C. B. Cummings & Sons.

The firm of C. B. Cummings & Sons takes its name from the founder, Chas. B. Cummings. Mr. Cummings was a remarkable man in a great many ways. He saw at an early date the possibilities of the lumber industry and with great foresight bought extensive wood rights. The present firm profits by his keen judgment.

The early history of the firm is interesting showing how hard work and determination will succeed. Chas. B. Cummings started in business in a shed back of C. B. Cummings' house on Main St. It was then owned by Squire Whitman. His first venture was as a cabinet maker. The business prospered and he moved first to a small shop in the Hathaway block in '61.

In '65, he erected the present office building and furniture store. Besides the lumber business he had a clothes pin mill at the Falls and a shoe findings or "paste shop" back of the Opera House which employed 60 to 70 operators. He retired in 1877. The paste shop and lower mill were burnt out in '94. After the rebuilding a heating plant was put in and a large grist mill and grain house built at the railroad station.

Chas. B's. children were Chas. S., died in '97; Stephen B., born April 27, '63, married Mattie M. Jordan, three children, Ruth, Stephen and Dorothy; Frederick born Sept. 24, '65, married Cora Shedd; George I., married Inez M. Stuart, two children, Charles and Julia, died March 4, '14; Edwin S., born Oct. 7, '73, married Catherine Elliott, one child, Elliott S.; Fannie W., born May 19, '78, married George H. Cullinan, one child, Henry.

The founder of the firm died in 1899, age 64 years. The business is carried on as before except that the leather business has been dropped.

The Bemis branch was started in 1901. Dowels are manufactured there. This is the largest part of the business and is increasing. 90 men are employed there through the summer.

The Norway branch employs about 40 men. The Norway branch manufactures long and short lumber, dowels and has manufactured clapboards. Their dowels have been shipped to England, Panama, Australia and, in a word, all over the world.

John H. Fletcher.

The proprietor of Norway's Candy Store came to Norway eleven years ago from Brunswick where he worked in a candy store.

Mr. Fletcher was born in Delphus, Ohio, and came to Portland when three. He still has a home in that city. While in Portland he had charge of the Morton Bon Bon Co. He worked there several years and then went to Brunswick and thence to Norway.

Since he came to Norway, Mr. Fletcher has bought a beryl mine in Buckfield which he operates. He also has a lapidary outfit in his store and is an expert gem cutter.

Mr. Fletcher married Isabelle Lloyd of Chatham, New Brunswick and has two children, Lloyd and Roy.

Besides the line of home-made candies and imported stock, Mr. Fletcher carries a complete line of Phonographs and the latest records.

H. B. Foster & Co.

The senior partner of the above firm was born in Norway, August 30, 1872. He attended the Norway schools and later fitted himself for a business career at Shaw's Business College of Portland.

Mr. Foster started in the clothing business as clerk for F. Q. Elliott for whom he worked two years. Then in 1891 he started for himself in the old Opera House block. Since that time he has run a very successful clothing store.

Since Mr. Foster started in business Lee M. Smith has been his chief clerk up to 1914, when the firm of H. B. Foster & Co. was formed.

Mr. Foster married Hattie S. Scribner of Paris and they have five children, three girls and two boys.

He is a member of Oxford Lodge No. 18, having been at one time master and is a member of other Masonic bodies.

H. B. Foster & Co. are one of the few firms in Norway with a branch store. This is located in Harrison and has been operated successfully for the past 16 years by W. A. Southworth.

Mr. Swett just worked for E. E. Millett for a year and then went into partnership with J. A. Kenney. The firm was called Kenney & Swett. They purchased the business belonging to Jackson Clark. Two years after they closed out their business and Mr. Swett worked for E. E. Millett until they opened their present store, Jan. 10, 1891.

Mr. Swett married Carrie E. Huntington of Island Pond, Vt. They have one child, Francis H., who is atending Bates college.

Mr. Swett is town and corporation treasurer. He has always been an active member of the Congregational church. He is Republican in politics.

This business was first owned by Smiley Bros. and called the Smiley Shoe Store. It was sold July 1892 to A. H. Berry Shoe Co. of Portland and used the same name until March 26, 1906 when a stock company was formed and the name changed to E. N. Swett Shoe Co.

A. H. Berry is President, Harold L. Berry, clerk and Treasurer, and E. N. Swett Manager. These three are the stock holders and directors.

The business was located four years in the Hathaway block and ten years in the present location.

MOTHER OF SCHOOL GIRL

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health.

Plover, Iowa.—"From a small child my 13 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and is growing strong and healthy."—Mrs. MARTIN HELVIG, Plover, Iowa.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

HUDSON Six-40—$1550 This Year f. o. b. Detroit

The Latter-Day Car

The 1915 model of the HUDSON Six-40 is the finest example of a latter-day car you can find on the market to-day.

It's a finished product. Four years have been spent on it by Howard E. Coffin and his 47 engineers. The last year has added 31 improvements.

Now here is their conception—the HUDSON conception—of the ideal car of to-morrow.

Its Advances

One aim has been to end the old-time over-taxes. Here is ample room but modest size. The car has seats for seven. Here is moderate but sufficient power. The engine develops 47 horsepower.

Here is lightness combined with strength—due to better materials and better designing. The car weighs 2890 pounds—or 1000 pounds less than former averages for cars of this capacity. Authorities say that 25 per cent. weight-saving cuts tire-expense in two.

Here is a new-type motor which immensely reduces operative cost.

Here are new lines, new beauty, new comforts and conveniences—many new ideas in equipment. No other car of to-day shows so many new attractions.

And here, above all, is a new-day price, applied to a quality car. Here is a high-grade Six—the finest car Howard P. Coffin has built—for $1550, f. o. b. Detroit.

The Show Car

This is the show car of to-day. The new conceptions will interest you. Come, see them while the car is new.

There were 3000 orders waiting for this model when the first car came from the shops. The HUDSON output has been trebled to meet the demand for it. You will know why this is when you see the car.

PORTLAND, BANGOR, AUGUSTA. SUMMER SCHOOL AT SOUTH CASCO.

WEST PARIS.

Gathering Under the Pines.

Mrs. S. T. White, Mrs. A. D. Coburn and daughter, Helen, spent a week at Ocean Park and had a very pleasant time attending the meetings and entertainments and gatherings in the surf. They visited Ferry Beach and Old Orchard.

While there they were invited to a social gathering under the pines at the summer cottage of Rev. L. W. Raymond and his daughter, Effie. The gathering was a strange coincidence of unusual interest, in that, among the gathering were representatives of all churches where Mr. Raymond had served as pastor during his 30 odd years in the ministery; also representatives from each of the home and foreign mission field of the Free Baptists.

Mr. Raymond in meeting the guests about Ocean Park discovered this fact and conceived the novel idea of bringing all these representatives together for a social afternoon which he carried out.

His first pastorate was in Harrison and from that church there were present Mrs. Gertrude Wyman, who was but a young girl at that time and who after finishing her education was married to Rev H. E. Wyman and went to Midwarpore, India as foreign missionaries. Her daughter Lena, who can speak three languages, was with her. Their present home is Chocorna, N. H.

Mr. Raymond's second pastorate was in Lowell, Mass., and Mrs. Annie Morse was the representative from that church.

His third pastorate was in Fairport, N. Y., where he remained 16 years. Here was where he did his greatest work. A new modern parsonage and church was built under his efficient directions and the interest increased to a large church society under his charge.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown, who have rooms in Mr. Raymond's cottage are from Fairport, N. Y.

Mr. Raymond on account of his health retired from this church to the smaller one in East Dixfield, where he preached for a few years before coming to West Paris and from the East Dixfield church there were two young ladies, Lida and Etta Allen and from West Paris there were Mrs. Coburn, Lila Cole and Mrs. White.

For the returned missionaries who were present were Rev. and Mrs. G. H. Hamlin, D. D., of Balasore, India and their son Frank, who was born in India, Mary W. Bacheler, M. D., of Balasore, India, Miss L. C. Coombs of Midnapore, India and Rev. Henry G. McDonald, President of Storer College, Harpers Ferry, West Virgina.

Mr. Raymond made remarks explaining the occasion and after a few memories of the Ocean Park Association. He built his cottage there 30 years ago and was present at the dedication of the Temple, a large auditorium where the preaching services and entertainments are held. All the gentlemen followed with individual reminicences of the Park and what it ha been to them and then the lady missionaries told their experiences with the native wild animals and reptiles, also their work in India, which were very interesting and laughable too. Ice cream, cake fancy cookies and saltines were served.

Rev. and Mrs. William R. Wood and daughter of Saco were among the invited guests of the occasion. Mr. Wood was Mr. Raymond's successor at Fairport, N. Y., and after the refreshments were served he made a few remarks about that church, of the good condition of the work, and of the ideal church property which he found there, closing with a brief prayer, all joining him in singing the Doxology. Lena Wyman sang a song in the native Bengali language.

There were 22 in all present and all enjoyed a delightful afternoon.
